Hal Perkins

Lecturer in Computer Science & Engineering
University of Washington
Box 352350, Seattle, WA 98195-3250
206.543.4784; perkins@cs.washington.edu

Recent Employment

1998-present.   Lecturer, Computer Science & Engineering, University of Washington.

1993-1998.   Lecturer, Computer Science, Cornell University.

Recent Curriculum Development Projects

1998-99.   Created CSE 582, Professional Master's Program compiler course.
New curriculum for CSE 413, programming languages & implementation.

1997-98.   Converted Cornell's CS1 course from C to Java (with David Gries)
Updated undergraduate/master's compiler course to new language (Java)
and new platform (NT/x86)

1996-97   Converted CS2 course from Pascal to C++
Created intermediate C++ programming course for non-C programmers

Education

M.S., Computer Science, Cornell University, 1982.

B.S., Mathematics, Arizona State University, 1975.

Service Activities

CSE142/143 (introductory courses) stewardship committee

Freshman Interest Group liaison

Professional Activities

Instructor, Microsoft Washington IT Educator's Institute for Community College instructors, August, 1999.

Reviewer, Springer-Verlag, Addison-Wesley

Member, ACM, IEEE

Awards

Cornell University Association of Computer Science Undergraduates 1998 Faculty of the Year